Dr. Brett Zyromski

Brett Zyromski is an Assistant Professor at The Ohio State University. His scholarship focuses on the impact of evidence-based interventions in school counseling, evidence-based school counselor education, and evaluation in school counseling. Dr. Zyromski is the co-founder and co-chair of the national Evidence-Based School Counseling Conference (<http://www.ebscc.org>). He has published over 25 peer-reviewed articles and book chapters related to school counseling issues, has delivered over 100 international, national, regional, and local presentations and has served as numerous international and state conference keynote. In addition to evidence-based school counseling, Dr. Zyromski's scholarship also explores how school counseling programs remove barriers to success for all students, with special attention paid to how school counselors can enhance protective factors and positive childhood experiences for students that have experienced adverse childhood experiences.
