

Academic Vocabulary List

What is the Academic Vocabulary List?

A list of words often found in school textbooks and other academic texts. Being able to quickly read and understand these words can help students at school.

How to use this list at home

Here are some examples of how to practice the Academic Vocabulary Words as a family. (Hint: You don't have to do these steps in order – after all – family life is not just like school!)

- 1) Ask your child/adolescent, “What does the word   [study]   mean?”
- 2) Help them understand the meaning(s) of the word. For example, “That’s true! The word “study” can be something we do to learn something new. What are some different ways we can study something?” “Yep! We can look closely at something, read about it, listen to a teacher talk about it, write a summary about it, or watch a video about it. Those are all ways of studying. Did you know it can also be a room in a house where you learn, like another name for a library?”
- 3) Tell your child, “The word   [study]   is often used in school textbooks, so it’s a good word to practice and know really well.”
- 4) Ask your child to write the word, type it, or use letter tiles of some kind to form the word in front of them.
- 5) Share the different forms that the word can take. For example, “Can you think of any words that are related to the word study, or different forms of the word? Like the past tense of study, or the present tense?”
- 6) Use the word in conversations with your child throughout your day or week. For example, “I wonder what a person has to study in school to become a weather forecaster. Do you know? Let’s look it up!”
- 7) Praise them when they use it in conversation or recognize it while they read.
