Working Together for Student Success

National Network of Partnership Schools (NNPS) Leadership Institute

ONLINE October 24, 25, and 26, 2023

NNPS professional development for effective and equitable programs of school, family, and community partnerships is based on more than four decades of research and fieldwork with districts and schools in diverse communities—urban, suburban, and rural. This Institute prepares district, organization, and state leaders to conduct research-based approaches and guide all schools—preschools, elementary, middle, and high schools—to implement and improve goal-linked programs of family and community engagement.

Leaders learn NNPS strategies that they can use to help school-based Action Teams for Partnerships (ATPs) engage all families in ways that contribute to student success in school. Improve your programs immediately for the 2023-24 school year.

When: The LIVE ONLINE Institute will be conducted October 24, 25, and 26 from 2 - 5 p.m. EDT. The Institute provides the same training as our face-to-face Institute when it was conducted in Baltimore.

Institute Evaluation

Next Steps: Send to NNPS Competency Checklist and (draft) Leadership Plan for Partnerships for the 2023-24 School Year

As part of the Leadership Institute, you may request an individual NNPS Zoom or phone meeting to help you complete your plan.

Who Should Attend?

The NNPS Leadership Institute is designed for District and Organization Leaders for Partnerships who will guide schools to strengthen and continually improve their programs of family and community engagement.

The Leadership Institute provides time to work together for:

- New leaders at the district, regional, organization, and state levels.
- All leaders who are ready to work with school ATPs.
- New colleagues who share leadership for partnership program development.

The Leadership Institute also prepares State and Regional Leaders for Partnerships to guide district leaders to work with their own schools' ATPs on goal-linked programs of family and community engagement for student success.

By completing this institute, YOU will be able to:

- Describe the NNPS model and conduct an NNPS One-Day Team Training Workshop for your schools' Action Teams for Partnerships.
- Guide schools to write goal-linked One-Year Action Plans for Partnerships.
- Describe the roles and responsibilities of Leaders for Partnerships.
- Select strategies for effective facilitation and leadership for partnerships in your location.
- Write a Leadership Plan for Partnerships to show how you will work on this agenda and increase collegial support for partnerships.

Professional Development

A letter for 16 hours of professional development will be issued to attendees who complete the full institute (Parts 1, 2, and 3).

A certificate will be issued to attendees who complete Parts 1 and 2 to verify the leader's skills to conduct the NNPS One-Day Team Training Workshop for school Action Teams for Partnerships.

What will you need to attend and complete this Institute?

ZOOM LINK (FREE) and comfortable work space. You will receive copies of all activities ahead of time to complete during the Institute.

You will return two activities to NNPS to record your completion of the Institute and to document your readiness to lead and succeed on partnerships. In return, NNPS will send you a related certificate and professional development letter.

Have handy a list of the goals for family and community engagement in your district, organization, or state.

National Network of Partnership Schools (NNPS)

National Network of Partnership Schools (NNPS) at Johns Hopkins University—founded in the 1996 school year by Dr. Joyce Epstein and her colleagues—provides professional development to strengthen leadership for excellent, equitable, and sustainable programs of family and community engagement to increase student success in school. Currently, NNPS includes active members in about 500 schools, districts, organizations, and state departments of education across the country, with some partners in other nations.

School members of NNPS use the research-based Framework of Six Types of school, family, and community partnerships, an Action Team for Partnerships (ATP), goal-linked engagement activities, and evaluation strategies to organize, implement, and continually improve plans, programs, and practices of family and community engagement. School ATPs of parents, educators, and community partners select involvement activities that create a welcoming school climate for all partners in education, and that are linked to goals for student success in their own School Improvement Plans. These include partnership practices to increase academic achievement in reading, math, science, and other subjects; and to improve behavioral outcomes such as attendance, attitudes toward school, health, and postsecondary plans.

District, organization, and state members of NNPS conduct leadership activities to organize and customize their work and guide school-based partnership programs. Using the NNPS approach of a “leadership ladder,” leaders at the state, regional, and district levels distribute responsibilities to help every school in a district organize an ATP to engage all families and community partners in ways that support all students’ learning and development at all grade levels.

What Did Members Say ?

“ It is important for family engagement activities to be “goal linked”— not just any activity—but focused on ways to increase student success.

Audiences are “volunteers.” I love that language!

We discussed how community service goals are another focus for goal-linked partnership activities.

Moving on to secondary schools will help us extend our partnership program. And it can be very important for high school students’ success.

The One-Year Action Plan for Partnerships is a wonderful, easy, and efficient tool that I will use in the future.

Family engagement is much more than a once-monthly activity at school. This Institute’s tools will make our program more purposeful with all of our partners.

Partnerships will be critical to our work on ensuring greater equity in education and more welcoming schools.

Using a “punch card” to keep track of volunteer activities and recognizing parents who give time as audience members are two great ideas.

We were struggling to hear the voices of all families. Having school teams with family reps can help us reach the hard-to-reach families and get their voices to the table.

I love how this program helps us bring different mindsets and ideas into our plans for partnerships. We can account for and honor differences that we have throughout our educational settings.

My “aha” moment – I am excited to have a way to help our district and schools plan their partnership programs in goal-linked ways.

This Institute exceeded expectations and increased my understanding about implementing good partnership programs.

Thank you six times over! I learned so much. My brain is processing how we will move forward. I will keep you ”
